EXPLANATORY NOTE

Every citizen enjoys the fundamental right to be free from discrimination which arises from his or her race, religion or ethnicity. The importance of this fundamental right cannot be overemphasized, especially in a country such as ours with a rich and diverse socio-cultural background. A peek into our history will reveal that stereotyping based on religion and ethnic background is one of the major barriers that our country has to hurdle in order to progress—hampering as it does efforts to unite the nation.

Stereotyping typically casts particular groups of people in a particular mold simply because of race, religion or ethnicity. Rooted in bigotry, it ascribes to these groups certain negative traits, such as when a person suspected of being involved in a crime is referred to as a “Muslim suspect”, when no such identification is made when such a suspect belongs to the Christian or other religions. This creates mistrust among our people and our institutions. It seriously erodes public confidence, discourages people from taking advantage of opportunities, effectively denies basic services to the most vulnerable sectors and thus creates a long-lasting negative impact both to the economy and to the community.

Individuals who belong to the stereotyped communities feel a diminished sense of citizenship, a feeling of being an unequal member of society even though we purport to live under one flag and one country. They also feel singled-out, simply because they belong to these stereotyped communities or groups. Thus, it also disempowers communities and creates divisions and an unwillingness to identify with and submit to the laws of the country.

This bill does not purport to be a panacea to cure these age-old ills. It is however believed that a greater knowledge and consciousness about the dangers of stereotyping and racial-cultural profiling will go a long way in mending and improving relations among the diverse members of our community and country.

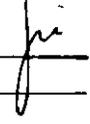

Urgent passage of this measure is therefore proposed.
